- IV. Critically analyse and answer any one of the following questions in about 150 words.
- 23. "A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds, adored by little statesmen and philosophers and divines. With consistency a great soul has simply nothing to do. He may as well concern himself with his shadow on the wall. Speak what you think now in hard words, and to-morrow speak what to-morrow thinks in hard words again, though it contradict every thing you said to-day. 'Ah, so you shall be sure to be misunderstood.' Is it so bad, then, to be misunderstood? Pythagoras was misunderstood, and Socrates, and Jesus, and Luther, and Copernicus, and Galileo, and Newton, and every pure and wise spirit that ever took flesh. To be great is to be misunderstood." Comment critically.
- 24. Present the main arguments in the given passage in not more than two sentences and attempt a one-page critical note on the passage.

The idea of the "all black society" within the superstructure of an all white society is useless as well (even if it were possible). We are Americans, which is our strength as well as our desperation. The struggle is for independence, not separation-or assimilation for that matter. Do what you want to with your life ... when you can. I want to be independent of black men just as much as I want independence from the white. It is just that achieving the latter involves all black men, or at least those who have not already taken those available roads into the mainstream I mentioned earlier- subservience, cowardice, and loss of manhood.

25. Discuss the themes of invisibility and self-realization with the following passage as a point of reference:

So I took to the cellar; I hibernated. I got away from it all. But that wasn't enough. I couldn't be still even in hibernation. Because, damn it, there's the mind, the mind. It wouldn't let me rest. Gin, jazz and dreams were not enough. Books were not enough. My belated appreciation of the crude joke that had kept me running, was not enough.
